Things I will not debate anymore

This is a list of things that I am not willing to 'debate' anymore. I will happily explain them if something is unclear, but if you're planning to try and convince me otherwise, don't bother. All of these are topics that I've had many - often many hundreds - of discussions about, and no new arguments show up anymore; but endless repeats of the same fallacies and non-arguments sure do, and I am not willing to put any more time and energy into them.

This list may (and probably will) grow over time, as new grifts show up.

Generative "AI" is harmful and should not be tolerated

There is an excellent article here, summarizing many of the reasons. Additionally, workers in poor countries are routinely and structurally exploited to even train these models to begin with. Also this article, which sets out in more detail how it affects how people work.
